Henrik has been a consultant for global organizations in corporate C-suites for more than 20 years. He is a strategist specializing in large-scale, systemic design and leadership training for problem solving.

In his analysis he combines abstract thinking and practice in a very pragmatic way.

His training comes from 12 years in the military as a technical officer and a paratrooper in the special forces. His technical specialty was in anti-aircraft missiles and radar systems. He left the military in 2000 as a Major.

He's now leading an elite team of specialists in cyber security, architecture, security analysis, and business development to bring digital sovereignty and network integrity to the world.
